Role and Impact of AI on the Future of Academic Publishing: A Global Survey Report by Enago

Enago recently published a comprehensive Global Survey Report on the revolutionizing role of Artificial Intelligence and its impact on the future of academic publishing. This survey forms a critical segment of the brand's holistic Research Risk Assessment survey series that aims at a profound analysis of every component related to the ever-evolving realm of research and publishing. The survey strongly verifies the notion that the role of AI is inimitable in the academic publishing sector and its impact can only become far-reaching in the future.

WHAT OUR CLIENTS HAVE TO SAY

"Thank you so much for your careful and perfect editing. Thank you for your helpful, valuable suggestions and insightful remarks. I am satisfied with your editing."

"More than just English corrections, the content doesn't add up and there are some parts that have been corrected differently from the original. I wonder if an expert of the part corrected it."

"The paper shows a high number of orthographic errors. 'gebe' is used instead of 'gene' in the manuscript."

"The editing helped very much in improving the grammar and linguistic structure of the manuscript."

PSE977, United States of America

As a freelance academic editor, Enago is one of my favorite clients. What sets them apart most is their respect for their contractors. While other editing companies often treat their editors as disposable, providing little meaningful feedback and docking pay without just cause, all my interactions with Enago have been friendly and helpful. Their feedback is highly detailed and has helped me develop as an editor, and when I have questions, they respond quickly.

Meet the Team

Jacob Kannadan

(Quality Analyst: Quality & Training)

If you were to write a book, what would the topic be?

I am a massive fan of fictional series in general. So, a fictional series with plenty of magical characters would be the most likely topic (a Harry Potter-esque book series).

Would you rather be a tiny elephant or a giant hamster?

A tiny elephant just because I find elephants so friendly and cute

Favorite fruit: Mangoes, especially during season. Grapes come a close second though.

Someone you would like to meet: Pep Guardiola. As an ardent football follower (and a diehard Manchester United fan), I consider this man the current-best manager in world football (even though he coaches Manchester City sadly 😊). I used to write up football analysis articles previously and I would love to get involved in a conversation with him.
