ENAGO EXPRESS

Everything Enago

What's New?

The three days of #ALPSP2023 went by in the blink of an eye and created a lasting impact. It was filled with important discussions around research integrity, diversity, and inclusion in publishing.

The third and final day of The Association Of Learned and Professional Society Publishers \(ALPSP\) was the most special for us as our very own Andrew Smith moderated a panel session on #OpenAccess in China. It was presided over by China market experts- Lei Shi from Tsinghua University, Nicko Goncharoff, consultant and China Publishing expert, and Gin Li, formerly from Springer Nature and an independent marketing specialist in China. Looking forward to next year!

WHAT OUR CLIENTS HAVE TO SAY

"This is a thank you note for the team who has helped with this manuscript. I am happy with the edits and I am glad that all my instructions were duly considered while reviewing this document. There is surely much to learn from the team about the magic of words. Thanks again! Looking forward for further collaboration."

"No feedback on improving the content of the paper, mostly journal formatting, some not reflected. Regarding English, fluency has improved, but there are typos and occasional grammatical error. Doubtful that it was done by a native speaker. ."

"Highly satisfied with the freelance experience in terms of the training provided, query resolution, and types of assignments provided."

"While editing manuscripts in diverse fields is an interesting part-time job, many practical and pragmatic problems in each area ultimately have hampered my ability as an editor to work on assignments efficiently."

EDITOR SPEAK

MB2635, United States

I started my Freelance career as a part-time occupation at Enago while I acclimated to life in a new country. Initially, I was onboarded for copy- and substantive editing assignments. However, after just a few months of experience at Enago, I was inducted into the pool of editors with more challenging responsibilities such as top-impact editing, journal selection, and peer review. Every single assignment has been a learning experience.

The best part about working at Enago is the team. Being new to this company and in a different country, I anticipated roadblocks along the way. But to my delight, the project management and the editing team were extremely communicative and available to answer my queries around the clock. The catch-up sessions with the freelancer experience team helped me express my concerns and future aims. As a direct result of these conversations, I was invited to be a part of the Enago Elite Editors Club, which offers better benefits. The team is always prompt, from helping with last-minute deadline extensions to sending instructions and formatting links on an SOS. The pay-out process is really straightforward. In summary, my experience at Enago has been quite enriching. I feel privileged to be a part of the EEE. I look forward to my future journey at this firm.
